

Members are warned that global unrest is no longer contained to the Ukraine and Arab nations, indeed far from it.

Recently, in my Professional Investors Fund report I forecast that Sterling would regain lost ground; this only being delayed by the fiasco driving the US Dollar higher.

The fiasco of course being recent events seen in Hong Kong, the third largest financial centre in the world which remains practically shut down by mass protests.

It could easily turn really nasty; indeed there have been many rumours of that on the streets of HK, according to a RIO member working there.

Since I am a very active currency trader I have been following the money - Hong Kong dollars are buying what they believe safety - the US dollar. This is driving the HK dollar down, but it also negatively affecting every other major currency.

This is the reason why the dollar surged again, and the euro plunged. I have talked on currency wars many times, as most members know from my reports on this topic, again I stress such event driven currency swings carry major implications for paper money.

Why does Hong Kong matter more? Because it is one of the world's largest banking and financial centres! Hence it has a larger impact on virtually every other economy in the world.

This simply reinforces my ARC report and its comments, members need to have insurance in the form of Gold bullion in your portfolio assets, after all the financial world is already changing at a rapid pace.
